William Goss Ripped Open From End to End.

HIT BY A CIRCULAR SAW

Frightful Accident to a Timberman in the Original Mine-It Happened While He Was at Work in the Carpenter Shop.

Death in the most terrible form that can be imagined came about 9 o'clock yesterday morning to William J. Goss, timberman of the Original mine. While working in the carpenter shop he was by a circular saw and literally ripped from end to end. He died in-

The circumstances of the frightful acident all occurred so instantaneously that even those who witnessed it were unable to tell exactly how it happened, Goss was engaged in cutting an angle brace at the circular saw in the carpenter shop and Councilman Charles Bausman and Andrew Rossetts stood watching the work. Goss drew the saw to-ward him and it appeared to run hard through the timber, requiring consider-able effort on his part, until suddenly able effort on his part, until suddenly it struck a softer spot and came with a rush. It caused Goss to lose his balance and he fell against the saw, which caught him just above the groin on the right side, ripping the body entirely in two from the groin to the right shoulder and sawing off the right hand at the wrist. It was all over in less than a second. The body was thrown back about six feet from the saw and fell on the floor, a ghastly sight, with the bowels protruding and blood spattered everywhere. The onlookers stood dazed for an instant by the terrible catastrophe, then sounding the alarm, dazed for an instant by the terrible catastrophe, then sounding the alarm, they ran to where the dead man lay. It was obvious that nothing could be done for the unfortunate man and, while waiting for the coroner to arrive, who had been immediately summoned, the workmen gathered about in groups and gazed at the awful sight, some of them with tears in their eyes, for Goss had been a favorite among the men. Corbeen a favorite among the men. Cor-oner Tremblay soon reached the scene, and after viewing the remains, the body was sent to Richards' undertaking

William James Goss was the oldest employe of the company operating the Original mine, in point of years of serv-ice. He came to Butte 19 years ago and ice. He came to Butte 10 years ago and had been in the employ of the same company ever since. He had held the position of timberman at the Original for several years. He was one of the best known mine employes in Butte and was universally liked and highly re-spected by all who knew him. The de-ceased was about 33 years old and un-married. He lived with the family of Thomas Bryant, foreman of the Orig-inal, at No. 625 North Main street, and was Mr. Bryant's warmest friend. He was a member of the Miners' unco and of the order of Kutgl ts of Pythias, and will be buried by the latter organization. The funeral will occur from the Bryant home, but the time has not yet been set, as the friends are waiting to hear from relatives. The deceased leaves three brothers, who live at Leeds, 8, D., and a widowed mother, who lives in England. At an inquest held by Coroner Tremblay in the afternoon no new facts were brought out. It was explained that the saw at which Goss was working was hung on a swinging frame. There was an iron handle by which to draw it toward and through the stick to be sawed, and a weight at the back to draw the saw back after the timber had been sawed. Goss placed a stick in front of the saw and drew it toward him. He stood directly in front of the saw and used the right hand to pull the saw, while he should have stood to one side and used his left hand in pulling the saw. Had he done this he could not have been injured. He crowded the saw too hard, breaking the rope which holds the weight at the back, and when the saw finally came through the tim-ber there was nothing to stop it and it struck the deceased and killed him. The inquest was held at Rickards' undertaking rooms at 4 o'clock, the jury returning a verdict that death was due to the carelessness of the deceased.

Alderman Charles Bausman testified that he was in the carpenter shop at the time of the accident. Goss was cutting braces at a circular saw, which had a weight attached at the back to draw it back after the stick it sawed. Instead of pulling the saw through with the left hand, as he should have done, he pulled it with his right, and stood in front of the saw instead of at the side, as he would have done had he pulled the saw with the left hand, the manner provided for. The witness glanced up to see the cage come up and when he looked back at the saw Goss lay on the floor. He, therefore, did not see the saw strike Goss, but supposed he pulled the saw against himself. Had the deceased pulled the saw with the left hand the accident would not have happened.

Andrew Rossette testified to seeing the accident. Goss was cutting angle brackets and the witness was assisting. Goss crowded the saw and it stopped. He let it back and pulled it up again, crowding as before. Suddenly the saw came through the timber with a rush and caught the deceased. Goss was not standing in his right place, but was pulling the saw with the right instead of the left hand, as he should have done. Had he used the left and stood to one side instead of in front of the saw the accident could not have happened. The witness stated that the machinery was all in good order.

Thomas Bryant, the foreman of the Thomas Bryant, the foreman of the mine, stated that Goss was an unusually good man and had been piaced in the position of timberman because of his reliability. Goss had worked for the witness for 10 years and a half.

The jury brought in a verdict, recition the discussions are supported by the control of the control of ing the circumstances under which the deceased came to his death, and attributed the accident to his own careless-ness in getting in front of the saw.

when especial provision was made to enable him to avoid that danger. A telegram was received last night from the brothers of Goss, at Lead City, S. D., asking that the funeral be not held until their arrival. The funeral will therefore probably not be held until Friday. It will be under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias and the Miners' union.

Last Meeting of the Old Board of County

The county commissioners met yester-day and the old board will hold its final session this week. Next Monday the present commissioners, David Charles. John E. collected $744.90 in fees during September. When the commissioners, some time ago, remitted the Singer Sewing company's tax, the state was called upon to pay back its portion, amounting to $4c. Yesterday the commissioners received word from the state board of ex-aminers that the $40 had been allowed, but could not be paid-back at this time because there were no available funds. They conveyed the usual information that a claim for the amount would be presented to the next legislature and if an appropriation was made it would be repaid. The commissioners, however, determined not to carry a $40 bill for the state for a year and a half, and they instructed the county treas-urer to deduct the sum from his next remittance of taxes to the state treas-> made upon the application of John F. Estey, who claims a sixth interest in the partnership, but who has been shut out by his partners. In his complaint, filed in court. Estey says that on the 1st of August William Jenkins, Samuel Smith, Robert French, John McDonald, George Woody and D. A. McLeod entered into the parinership to operate the Belmont, and on Oct. 29 Robert

French sold his interest to Estey. Un der the terms of the partnership agreement, each of the six partners was to have a sixth interest in the profits and losses. Estey says he offered to put up his share of the expenses, but the de-fendants refused to accept his money and would not allow him to enter the nrine or have anything to say or do with the operations. He alleges that they are about to dispose of the lease and bond they hold on the Belmont and intend to exclude him from the benefits of it. He asked the court for the apcounting and for a dissolution of the partnership. The receiver put up a $1,000 bond and was put in charge of the property. John W. Cotter is counsel for Estey.

Attorneys in civil cases set for hearing in Judge Clancy's court do not seem to be anxious to go to trial. So far not a single case among those recently set has geen tried, but for one reason or another all have been continued as fast as they were reached. The case of Richard Mengone against Alex Gillian, ex-sheriff of Jefferson county, had been set for trial yesterday, but the defendant's attorney. W. E. Carroli, made an affidavit that Theophile Lonneau was the real defendant and he neau was the real defendant and he was in the woods near Homestake and had not yet learned that his case had been set for trial. Mr. Carroll said the case had been set out of its order and without his knowledge or consent, but as soon as he learned of it he wrote to his client, but had not been able to reach him. Upon that showing Judge Clancy vacated the setting and the trial jury was discharged. The present reporting six days in a week since the 12th of October, at $3 a day 12th of October, at $3 a day each. In that time they have been actually employed five days, or rather on five cases, all state cases, and one convic tien was secured, and the sentence of one justice court case was reduced. re are no cases set for trial to-day but the jury will draw pay and their total fees, not including incidental ex-penses, will amount to $1,720, with one conviction and a penitentiary sentence of oe year to show for it. A juror's lot is not such a hard one as is generally supposed. It had formerly been the rule in both departments, and is yet in department No. 1, that jurors were paid only for the time actually needed in court and their number seldom was more than 24, but Judge Clancy made a new and apparently just rule that when men are drawn on a jury, and in many instances at a loss to them-selves, they should be paid for six days in a week, whether their services are

They deny that the plaintiff or any of the defendants named in the suit have any interest in the property. They claim, under a location and occupancy that had been undisputed for many years and under deeds from Edwin M. Bowen, now deceased. They also set up the statute of limitations and ask the court to order the receiver, who has been in possession of a portion of the property or some time, to restore it to them. African Beetles in London.

The London News says: There are the zoological gardens in London no less than five of these great African beetles, which seem to take kindly to their new quarters. Four of them, placed together in one cage, belong to the species Goliathus Drury, of which one specimen was exhibited in 1895— the first example received by the so-ciety, and probably the first ever brought alive to this country, and two others were received in the following year. This gigantic insect excited a good deal of interest at the time among the general public and in scientific cir-cles. The fifth specimen, now in the insect house, though evidently of the same genus, is of a different species from the other four. The general coloration of Drury's Goliath beetle is creamy white and downy black on the upper surface; in the fifth specimen the upper surface is of a rich warm red, marked on the thorax with longi-tudinal white stripes. In the small cage in the same house is a purple sun bird (Cinnyris Asiaticus), presented by Frank Finn of the India museum, Calcutta. These birds, though common in India, have been till now unrepre-sented in the society's collection, from the difficulty of bringing them to this country. The adult male has the upper parts violet glossed with green, pectoral tufts of yellow and red, and is ESTEY MAKES COMPLAINT dark blue on the under surface; the female is ashy brown above and creamy white beneath. The next is an elongated domed structure, generally suspended from the extremity of a twig of some low bush, and artfully covered with cobwebs, in which spiders are often to be seen weaving their toils, having extended the web to the sur-rounding branches, thus rendering the deception still more effective; and it would seem as if the birds were aware of this, and left their helpers undis-

A DEAD MAN'S MILLIONS.

Strange Story Revealed by a Search Among Custom House Records.

From the New York World. Every morning during the last fortight a man and a woman have appeared at the customs house and have hurried to the record room the moment the doors were unlocked.

There, day in and day out, they busy themselves amid the musty mass of manifests which have been accumulating ever since Uncle Sam first began

One of the searchers is a representative-from the office of Lawyer Edward, E. McCall. The woman is believed to be the agent of a Berlin lawyer.

the year 1837, Mr. McCall said, one Heyman Hahn. He came to America to make a fortune. Upon his arrival in New York he opened a small tobacco shop in "The Swamp." He prospered. In 1838 he was married to Mary Buskey. Hahn being a Hebrew the mar-riage took place in a synagogue, and the marriage certificate was given to a Miss Bertha May, a friend of the bride, who was the only witness at

A few years went by, and Hahn's business increased vastly, and his little shop gave way to a larger establishleading tobacco merchants in "The Swamp," as well as the editor of one of the first tobacco trade journals in

New York. When Hahn died, in 1875, he left a comfortable little fortune to his five children, and his two sons, Isaac and Louis, continued the business. But a few of his friends ever knew that he was a relative of the great banker Hirshfield of Berlin.

About four years ago Louis Hishfield, the banker of Berlin, died intestate, leaving a large fortune, and an advertisement was published asking for formation as to his relatives, and Isaac Hahn, the eldest son of the tobacco merchant, believing from proof in his possession that the banker was his father's cousin, through Lawyer Mc-Call got Governor Flower interested in
